

Welcome to Indianapolis!

World class city and home of the 2012 Super Bowl...

Where thoughtful allocation of tax payer dollars assures citizens and visitors alike a wonderful feeling of achievement and prestige

$700M for a football stadium with a $75M retractable roof

$25M for preparation of the Super Bowl spectacle

$12M for remodeling of Georgia St. - to be leased at no-cost to the private entity
"Indianapolis Downtown, Inc."

$100M loan backed by taxpayers money for a developer's (Buckingham) project that no private lender would fund.

$6.8M offered to help finance a campaign contributor's construction of a private (Broadripple) parking garage

$3.5M of public money provided to the keep a basket ball team owner happy

$138,915 for payment of penalty fees on over-due utility fees, and...

What the city administration doesn't want you to know is... that instead of proactively investing resources at the front-end for the care and treatment of animals who find their way to the municipal shelter, it chooses to kill them, allocating...

$1.8M a year for population-control killing of 50% of the animals who come into the city's shelter/year

8,000 adoptable animals/year = 24 animals/day

Deposited in the landfill like trash

Welcome to Indianapolis!

Where the value for life is paralyzed

"You do what you can with the resources given." Mayor Greg Ballard, channel 6 interview.